ABSTRACT

In order that it might compare the levels of salaries paid its professional staff members with salaries paid for somewhat similar positions in other states, the Connecticut Commission for Higher Education requested these data from other states having higher education coordinating commissions or boards of regents. Two tables are included. The first reports actual salaries, ranked from high to low, for the chief administrator and for those personnel having their major assignments in the 10 areas of responsibility that produced more than 10 responses from the 47 cooperating states. This table includes salaries for no more than one person having that responsibility as his major assignment. The second table shows the number of total man-years assigned to each areas of responsibility for each state. Arbitrary estimates of time were made from a formula developed for this purpose. The formula was then applied in a consistent manner for each state. A series of charts list titles identified in the "other" assignment category, the frequency of specific titles reported for the chief administrators, the primary responsibilities carried out by the chief administrators, medical/health positions reported, and the frequency of agency titles. In the appendix of the report are the state responses for those states that did not object to having their response printed. (Author/PG)

INTRODUCTION

In order that it might compare the levels of salaries paid its professional staff members with salaries paid for somewhat similar positions in other states, the Connecticut Commission for Higher Education requested these data from other states having higher education coordinating commissions or boards of regents. To make the results more meaningful in terms of actual assignments, the respondents were asked to indicate the principal assignment of the staff member and other assignments that required a significant portion of his/her time. Twelve areas of responsibility were identified from previous studies of this type based upon position titles alone. A column headed "other" was provided for those positions not fitting the twelve designated areas.

COMPARISONS PROVIDED

Two tables are included. The first reports actual salaries, ranked from high to low, for the chief administrator and for those personnel having their major assignments in the ten areas of responsibility which produced more than ten responses from the 47 cooperating states. This table includes salaries for no more than one person in each state and that was the highest salary reported for the person having that responsibility as his major assignment. The requirement of at least ten persons in each area to be reported resulted in "accreditation" and "independent colleges" being excluded from this table.

The second table shows the number of total man-years assigned to each area of responsibility for each state. Arbitrary estimates of time were made from a formula developed for this purpose. The formula was then applied in a consistent manner for each state.

A series of charts list titles identified in the "other" assignment category, the frequency of specific titles reported for the chief administrators, the primary responsibilities carried out by the chief administrator, medical/health positions reported, and the frequency of agency titles.

In the appendix of the report are the state responses for those states that did not object to having their responses printed.

In this table are listed the highest salaries paid to those persons in each state agency having their principal assignments in the categories heading the eleven columns. At the bottom of the table appears the total number of positions included in each job category, the median for the category, and the 25th and 75th percentile salary figures. The median figure is the salary or the salary point above and below which there are an equal number of salaries. The range from the 25th to 75th percentiles includes the mid-50 percent of salary figures. One-fourth of the salaries are above the 75th percentile and one-fourth are below the 25th percentile.

To illustrate with the chief administrator's position, the median is $36,075, that salary which is 24th in order from the lowest salary and from the highest salary. The 25th and 75th percentiles are derived figures which indicate the salary points that separate the bottom one-fourth and the top one-fourth. The range for the mid 50 percent then is from $30,864 to $42,500. One-fourth receive salaries above $42,500 and one-fourth receive salaries below $30,864. Three salaries are significantly lower than the next lowest salary. These have been included in the determination of the median and the quartile positions.

Data for the salaries of the other positions can be read and understood in a similar manner. In terms of salary levels, the positions of academic programs, budget and fiscal matters, planning, and legislation follow the position of the chief administrator in order. In Chart C it can be noted that the primary responsibility of the chief administrator was checked as "planning" in 29 of the 47 responses. Since the salaries of the chief administrators were all included in the "chief administrator" column of Table 1, the "planning" salary most frequently used was the second highest in that column in that state.

This table shows the man-years assigned to various responsibilities by each state and for all state respondents. It was necessary to make assumptions about the percentages of time represented by the check marks made on the information sheets. The chart below illustrates the method used in assigning values to the check marks:
(A similar practice was followed for other combinations)

Number of checks		Value in Man-Years
Major	Minor	Major	Minor
0	1	-	1.00
0	2	-	.50 each
1	0	1.00	-
1	1	.70	.30
1	2	.50	.25 each
1	3	.40	.20 each
2	0	.50 each	-
2	1	.40 each	.20
2	2	.30 each	.20 each

Assuming that this method provides a reasonably accurate indication of assignments of time, it can be seen that approximately one-seventh of the staff time goes to each of the areas of "planning," "data collection and research," and "programs." Approximately one-ninth of the manpower is assigned to "budget and fiscal." While 8.6 percent of the manpower is assigned to "student financial assistance," almost half of the man-years is in New Jersey alone. The least amounts of time were assigned to work with independent colleges and to accreditation.

Chart A

This lists titles for those major assignments checked in the "other" category. Among the titles that appear to be responses to more recent needs and pressures are those providing legal services, auditing, collective bargaining, and compliance.

Chart B

This chart indicates that "Executive Director" and "Chancellor" are the most frequently reported of the eleven different titles used for the chief administrative officer in these state higher education agencies.

Chart C

"Planning" was reported by 29 of the 47 respondents as the primary responsibility of the chief administrative officer, while ten others indicated that his responsibilities extended to all areas.

Chart D

Medical and health-related titles are listed in this chart.

Chart E

The frequency of use of different agency titles is shown.

Appendix

A copy of the response from each state that did not object to its report being printed is included in the appendix for other comparisons the user may desire.
